1. Nature of Debate and Delegate Conduct

UN4MUN Rules of Procedure emphasizes substantive discussion, consensus-building, and constructive diplomacy. Delegates are expected not merely to deliver speeches, but to engage actively with one another's ideas, analyze differing viewpoints, and collectively work towards practical and implementable solutions.

Throughout committee proceedings, delegates should focus on the quality of their arguments, the depth of their analysis, and their ability to respond to the concerns raised by other member states. Productive debate is expected to involve critical engagement, diplomacy, negotiation, and collaborative problem-solving rather than the repetition of prepared statements.

All delegates are expected to maintain diplomatic decorum and professional conduct at all times. Formal language should be used throughout committee sessions, and delegates should refer to one another by their respective country names.

The Executive Board shall guide the proceedings of committee, maintain order, interpret procedure, and ensure that debate remains productive and relevant to the agenda. The decisions of the Executive Board regarding procedure shall be considered final.

Unless otherwise specified by the Executive Board, committee shall function as a chitless committee.

3. Roll Call

Each committee session shall begin with a Roll Call conducted by the Executive Board. Delegates shall respond with only:

"Present"

Delegates who fail to respond during Roll Call may be marked absent for that session.

Roll Call establishes attendance and determines whether quorum has been met for committee proceedings.

4. Opening of Debate And Agenda Setting

Following Roll Call, delegates may raise procedural motions to open formal debate and, set the agenda for discussion, which had been pre-given before the conference.

Once the agenda has been established, the committee shall proceed to Opening Statements.

5. Formal Formals (Opening Statements)

Formal Formals constitute the first substantive phase of debate.

During this stage, each delegation is provided an opportunity to present its position on the agenda before the committee. Delegates are encouraged to outline their country's perspective, identify key concerns, and present broad approaches or priorities relevant to the issue under discussion.

Formal Formals are intended to provide delegates with an understanding of the positions represented within the room and establish a foundation for subsequent debate.

There is no concept of yielding in UN4MUN. Upon the completion of a speech, the delegate's speaking time automatically concludes. Delegates may not yield time to another delegate, to the Executive Board, or for questions.

At the discretion of the Executive Board, questions may arbitrarily however be entertained every speech. The number, format, and allowance of such questions shall remain entirely at the discretion of the dais.

It is also to be noted, after all opening statements are taken, the committee shall only then proceed to informal forms of debate.

6. Formal Informals

Formal Informals constitute the primary mode of substantive debate within committee.

A Formal Informal is a structured discussion during which delegates deliberate upon specific aspects of the agenda in greater detail. Delegates are expected to engage directly with the arguments, concerns, and proposals raised by other member states. Debate during a Formal Informal should be dynamic, interactive, and solution-oriented.

Unlike a sequence of individual speeches, Formal Informals are intended to function as a continuous discussion. Delegates are encouraged to respond to previous speakers, seek clarification, challenge assumptions, support proposals, and contribute constructively to the ongoing debate.

Motions for Formal Informals generally specify only the total duration of discussion. The management of speaking order shall depend upon the form of moderation adopted by the committee.

There are two types of moderation:

A. Self-Moderated Formal Informals

A Formal Informal may be conducted through self-moderation.

Under this format, delegates themselves manage the flow of debate. Self-moderation may take either of the following forms:

- a) Moderator-Based Self-Moderation: A delegate is selected to moderate the discussion and recognize speakers throughout the duration of the Formal Informal.
- b) Speaker-Based Self-Moderation: At the conclusion of their remarks, a delegate recognizes the next speaker, thereby maintaining the flow of discussion among committee members.

Delegates participating in self-moderated debate are expected to exercise fairness, maintain order, and ensure that discussion remains productive and inclusive.

B. Executive Board Moderated Formal Informals

A Formal Informal may also be moderated directly by the Executive Board.

Under this format, members of the Executive Board recognize speakers and manage the progression of debate.

Note: The choice of moderation style shall remain subject to the discretion of the Executive Board and the committee.

7. Informal Informals

The committee may enter an Informal Informal through an approved procedural motion.

During an Informal Informal, delegates may move freely throughout the committee room and engage in direct discussion with one another. This period allows delegates to negotiate, exchange ideas, clarify positions, build consensus, and collaboratively develop solutions to the agenda.

The duration and conduct of Informal Informals shall remain subject to the approval and supervision of the Executive Board.

8. Points

The following points shall be recognized during committee proceedings.

Point of Personal Privilege

A Point of Personal Privilege may be raised when a delegate's ability to participate effectively in committee proceedings has been impaired or he/she is facing some physical discomfort. Examples include inability to hear a speaker, technical difficulties, or other circumstances affecting participation, too cold of a temperature, etc.

Point of Order

A Point of Order may be raised when a delegate believes that a procedural error has been committed by the Executive Board. Such points must concern procedure only and may not be used to challenge factual statements, policy positions, or substantive arguments.

Point of Inquiry

A Point of Inquiry may be directed to the Executive Board when a delegate seeks clarification regarding committee procedure, debate format, or the application of these Rules of Procedure.

All points should be concise, respectful, and raised only when appropriate.

Right of Reply

A Right of Reply may be granted when a delegate believes that their country, delegation, or national dignity has been directly insulted during debate.

Disagreement, criticism of policy, or opposition to a country's position shall not automatically constitute grounds for a Right of Reply. The granting of a Right of Reply remains entirely at the discretion of the Executive Board.

9. Voting Procedure

When the Executive Board determines that discussion on a matter has been exhausted, committee may proceed to paperwork and its voting.

All voting (including procedural ones) within committee shall be conducted through a simple majority unless otherwise specified by the Executive Board.

Simple Majority: 50% of total delegates present +1

A proposal shall be considered adopted if it receives more votes in favour than against. Delegates shall cast their votes in accordance with the instructions provided by the Executive Board during voting procedure.

Once voting has concluded, the decision announced by the Executive Board shall be considered final.
