About Calcutta Boys' School

A Legacy of Leadership - Est. 1877

“Dei Mundus Deo – The World of God, for God.”

Calcutta Boys' School is a distinguished Christian Minority institution founded in March 1877 by Bishop James Mills Thoburn under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Governed by the Calcutta Boys' School Educational Society—a registered non-profit charitable organization—it operates under the authority of the Bengal Regional Conference of the Methodist Church in India.

The school's iconic main campus at 72 S.N. Banerjee Road stands as a testament to the generous patronage of Sir Robert Laidlaw, whose visionary support helped transform a humble beginning into a landmark of excellence. What started with just six students on the rear veranda of the Thoburn Church parsonage has, over nearly 150 years, evolved into one of Kolkata's most respected centres of learning—where timeless values seamlessly blend with forward-looking innovation.

In keeping with its mission to extend quality education to wider communities, CBS has established additional campuses at Sonarpur (2008), Beliaghata (2010), and Asansol (2015). These branches carry forward the same spirit of holistic development that defines the mother institution.

In this landmark 149th year, Calcutta Boys' School proudly celebrates a century and a half of dedicated service in education. Deeply rooted in the enduring Christian values of love, sincerity, justice, equality, and liberty, the school continues an unwavering commitment to holistic education - nurturing intellectually vibrant, morally grounded, and socially responsible global citizens and ethical leaders of tomorrow.

Inspired by faith, and driven by purpose, the school fosters academic rigour, character formation, and leadership excellence in every student.

From humble beginnings to a proud legacy of leadership — in this 149th year, Calcutta Boys' School remains dedicated to inspiring, uplifting, and empowering generations.

Principal's Message

Calcutta Boys' School presents Assembly of Nations (AON 2026). It is with great pride and excitement that we invite all delegates, faculty advisors, and distinguished guests to the much-anticipated return of the Calcutta Boys' School – Assembly of Nations (AON 2026).

Since its inception, AON has stood as far more than a Model United Nations conference. It is a vibrant celebration of intellect, a rigorous platform for nuanced dialogue, and a powerful incubator for the next generation of thoughtful leaders. In an increasingly interconnected yet complex world, the ability to engage critically, communicate persuasively, and collaborate constructively has never been more essential.

At Calcutta Boys' School, we are deeply committed to providing our students with opportunities that transcend the boundaries of the classroom. The Assembly of Nations embodies this vision — fostering global awareness, cultivating empathy, and reinforcing the belief that true diplomacy lies not in dominance, but in dialogue; not in division, but in collective resolve and meaningful cooperation.

After a successful relaunch in 2025, we now step forward with even greater momentum into AON 2026. We believe this generation possesses not only the potential to inherit tomorrow's world, but the vision, courage, and capability to improve it. We invite every delegate to approach the committees with curiosity and open minds, and to depart with enriched perspectives, sharpened skills, and an enduring commitment to positive change. We look forward to dynamic debates, creative solutions, and the forging of lifelong friendships at this edition of Assembly of Nations.

United Nations General Assembly

"To save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind."

Agenda - Establishing legal barriers against the placement of weapons in orbit and the terrestrial targeting of satellite networks.

The United Nations General Assembly Fourth Committee (SPECPOL) serves as the ultimate strategic crossroads of international diplomacy, where the world's most sensitive political mandates are debated, refined, and brought to life.

Renowned for its extraordinary versatility, SPECPOL is the primary engine for global transformation, bridging the gap between high-level security theory and the raw reality of modern technological warfare. This is a committee for the tactical thinker and the visionary negotiator—a high-stakes environment where delegates must navigate the intricate web of national sovereignty and collective duty to resolve the world's most persistent diplomatic deadlocks. This session, the Committee will turn its focus toward the final frontier of global stability, establishing legal barriers against the placement of weapons in orbit and the terrestrial targeting of satellite networks. This mandate requires the technical precision of a strategist and the foresight of a statesman to ensure that the orbital commons remain a sanctuary for peaceful development. We invite the most driven and astute delegates to step into this hub of political evolution; in this chamber, the delegates will architect the multilateral frameworks necessary to prevent the militarization of space and secure the digital infrastructure of the 21st century.

The agenda focuses on the evolving and under-regulated domain of outer space and satellite security, requiring delegates to assess frameworks such as the Outer Space Treaty in addressing threats like anti-satellite (ASAT) weapons, space weaponization, and cyber-attacks. Delegates must balance strengthening these laws with state interests while addressing challenges posed by the dual-use nature of space technology, including verification, enforcement, and the risk of an arms race, along with the need for safeguards to maintain space as a domain of peaceful cooperation.

* Maximum capacity - 50 (Double delegation)

United Nations Security Council

"Peace is not the absence of conflict, but the ability to handle conflict by peaceful means."

Agenda - The situation in the Middle East

The United Nations Security Council (UNSC) stands as the world's most formidable vanguard of international security, operating as the only body with the supreme authority to enforce global peace through binding mandates. It is a high-intensity arena of realpolitik, where the most capable diplomatic minds must navigate the delicate balance between national sovereignty and the urgent necessity of collective action. In this committee, the atmosphere is charged with the weight of global responsibility as delegates master the intricate mechanics of geopolitical strategy and rapid crisis management. This year, the Council turns its focus to the Situation in the Middle East, a multifaceted landscape that demands both intellectual rigor and visionary leadership to bridge centuries of complexity. This is the ultimate stage for those ready to confront the world's most enduring challenges head-on; here, the delegates will not just witness the turning tides of global history the delegates will be the ones to turn them.

The agenda addresses interconnected conflicts, political tensions, and humanitarian concerns shaping global stability, requiring delegates to examine issues such as territorial disputes, armed conflicts, refugee displacement, and international intervention. Key discussions will focus on balancing counterterrorism efforts with human rights, the impact of foreign involvement, and the challenge of ensuring long-term peace in a region marked by deep-rooted divisions and shifting alliances.

Furthermore, the committee provides an opportunity to deliberate on pressing concerns like ceasefire negotiations, sanctions, peacekeeping operations, and humanitarian aid distribution. Delegates must engage in fast-paced decision-making, often responding to evolving crisis scenarios that test both their diplomatic skill and strategic thinking. Through negotiation, coalition-building, and resolution drafting, participants will strive to propose viable solutions that uphold international law while addressing the urgent realities on the ground.

* Maximum capacity -25 (Single Delegation)

United Nations Human Rights Council

"To deny people their human rights is to challenge their very humanity,"

Agenda - The promotion and protection of all human rights: Ensuring the accountability of state actors for the safeguarding of civilian life and fundamental freedoms in zones of active military escalation.

The UNHRC stands as the world's most vital stage for justice, where the mandate of United Nations General Assembly Resolution 60/251 transforms from ink on paper into a powerful shield for the voiceless. As a delegate in this high-stakes plenary, you are not just debating policy; you are the final line of defense for the Right to Life and the sanctity of civilian existence amidst the chaos of state-on-state hostilities. This committee is the heartbeat of the UN, offering an electrifying environment where the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is the ultimate weapon against aggression. The task of the delegates is to investigate, to advocate, and to hold the powerful accountable, making this the most critical and intellectually charged forum for those who believe that even in the heat of war, the dignity of every human being remains non-negotiable.

Expanding upon this mandate, delegates must grapple with the complex realities of enforcing human rights in conflict zones where sovereignty, security concerns, and humanitarian obligations often collide. Mechanisms such as fact-finding missions, commissions of inquiry, and special rapporteurs become crucial tools in uncovering violations and ensuring transparency. The challenge lies not only in documenting abuses but in translating findings into meaningful accountability, whether through international pressure, sanctions, or referrals to judicial bodies.

The committee must address critical issues including the protection of civilians, the targeting of journalists and humanitarian workers, and the curtailment of fundamental freedoms under the pretext of national security, while also confronting emerging challenges such as misinformation, digital surveillance, and technology-driven warfare. Ultimately, the UNHRC's role as a moral compass depends on the political will of states, the strength of its mechanisms, and the resolve of its delegates to uphold the collective responsibility of protecting human dignity even in times of crisis.

* Maximum capacity - 50 (Double delegation)

United Nations- Special Committee On Peacekeeping Operations (C-34)

"Peace is not merely the absence of war, but the presence of justice and the strength of the institutions we leave behind."

Agenda - Strategies for the transition of United Nations peacekeeping operations to a sustainable peacebuilding presence.

The Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations (C-34) stands as the United Nations' flagship architect of global stability, uniquely mandated to bridge the gap between high-level mandates and the tactical realities of the field. This is a high-stakes crucible of operational diplomacy, where elite strategists navigate the entire lifecycle of a mission—from the initial deployment of "Blue Helmets" to the definitive withdrawal of international forces. At this year's simulation, delegates will tackle the ultimate challenge of mission longevity: Strategies for the transition of United Nations peacekeeping operations to a sustainable peacebuilding presence. From the intricate mechanics of Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration (DDR) to the foundational work of Security Sector Reform (SSR), the Committee must ensure that military stabilization evolves into resilient civilian governance. Drawing from the hard-learned lessons of missions in Mali (MINUSMA) and the complexities in Sudan, the Council must engineer a phased exit that prevents the resurgence of conflict. As the world watches the delicate handover from foreign boots to local authority, will the delegates architect a transition that ensures the departure of a mission is the birth of a lasting peace, or will history record it as merely the prologue to the next crisis?

Delegates must ensure local ownership and legitimacy in post-conflict societies by promoting inclusive political processes, strong institutions, and active civil society participation. Transitions require coordination with regional bodies, governments, and humanitarian agencies, while addressing funding gaps, mandate clarity, and the risks of premature withdrawal or prolonged dependence. At the same time, evolving threats such as asymmetric warfare and climate-induced instability demand more adaptive peacekeeping approaches. Ultimately, success lies not just in ending conflict, but in building a durable and self-sustaining peace, testing the United Nations' long-term credibility.

* Maximum capacity -20 allotments (Single Delegation)

Group of Twenty (G20)

"Economic growth and security are two sides of the same coin; one cannot flourish without the stability of the other."

Agenda - International Economic Cooperation: Assessing the impact of regional instability on global energy security, supply chain resilience, and macro-economic stability.

The G20 serves as the premier forum for international economic cooperation, where the world's largest economies must navigate the volatile intersection of geopolitics and global finance. In this high-pressure simulation, the task of the delegates is to safeguard the global market from the shockwave of regional conflict, focusing on the security of the Strait of Hormuz and the stability of global energy prices. As architects of the global financial architecture, delegates must forge consensus on crisis management and fiscal resilience, ensuring that regional tensions do not derail the collective progress of the global economy, making this committee the ultimate test of strategic diplomacy and economic foresight.

Expanding upon this mandate, delegates must confront the intricate interdependence of global supply chains, where disruptions in one region can cascade across continents, affecting industries, trade flows, and consumer markets. The challenge lies in strengthening supply chain resilience through diversification, strategic reserves, and enhanced international cooperation, while avoiding protectionist tendencies that could further destabilize markets. Particular attention must be given to critical sectors such as energy, food, and technology, which are especially vulnerable to geopolitical shocks.

Fluctuations in energy markets caused by instability in key regions pose serious risks to inflation, currency stability, and overall macroeconomic health, requiring delegates to consider coordinated monetary and fiscal responses, the role of multilateral institutions, and a gradual shift toward sustainable energy sources. At the same time, the G20 embodies both economic power and collective responsibility, demanding that member states rise above national interests to act in global solidarity. Delegates must therefore strike a balance between immediate crisis management and long-term economic stability, ensuring a resilient, inclusive, and secure global economy in the face of uncertainty.
